Creating Your Plan

Your record book can serve as a final set of directions to help ease loved ones' minds, prevent disputes and begin the process of settling your estate. All of this helps bring comfort to your family, and clarity to the legacy you wish to leave behind.

As you progress with your planning, your attorney should counsel you on all aspects as well as draft all legal documents. We would also be happy to assist you with your charitable intentions at the outset or after you have completed your record.

Your Record Book...

- Gives you space to list the important details of your life
- Allows you the chance to provide direction for family immediately following your passing
- Provides an opportunity to outline your full estate
- Lets you list which charities will benefit from your estate

Good to Know

If you're married or partnered, you and your significant other should prepare separate record books. While some sections contain shared information, most sections are distinctly personal. Plus, it makes it easier for loved ones to manage your unique affairs over time. For additional copies of this record book, please contact us.

A Note About Names

In order to be fully comprehensive, we suggest including all aliases for each person listed throughout this record book. This could be a maiden name, former name, or preferred name.

Did You Know?

The concept of a digital estate is relatively new, but almost everyone has one these days. While you can include instructions on how your family should handle your digital estate data in your will, it's more complicated than you may think. Some states require you to name a digital executor to handle those materials after your lifetime.

Calculate Your Estate's Net Worth

What Is Your Estate Really Worth?

Your estate's value from an estate planning viewpoint is different from your net worth, which is a snapshot of what you own and what you owe.

Fortunately, most people find they have much more in their estate than they thought when they account for savings, employer and personal life insurance, retirement plan benefits and perhaps even a future inheritance. An inventory of your assets and liabilities will help you determine what you can leave to loved ones and charitable organizations after your lifetime and how to best provide for the distribution of your estate.

Make an Inventory of Your Assets

How you title your property is an important part of any estate plan. Be sure to identify how your property is held—if it is owned by you individually, jointly with a spouse or partner or as community property. Learn more about how property can be owned in the gray box below.

Use the current market value for everything you own and the face value (not cash value) for any life insurance. Don't strive for exact amounts; round numbers will do.

Make Property Decisions

Once you've made an inventory of your property, you're ready to decide where you want it to go. The following pages can help you organize your plans.

Once the worksheets are complete, you are ready to meet with your attorney.

How to Tell "Mine" From "Ours"

To determine whether or not you can pass all or part of an asset by your will, you should know its form of title. There are three ways property can be owned jointly.

- 1. Jointly owned property with rights of survivorship generally goes to the surviving joint owner, regardless of what the will states.
- 2. Tenants-in-common is also a form of joint ownership where two or more individuals own the property. The main difference is that one half of the property will follow the provisions in your will; therefore, your beneficiary will become the new co-owner after your lifetime with your original tenant-in-common.
- 3. Community property is also a form of co-ownership, but is applicable only between spouses. Some states allow married couples to take title in this manner. When property is held this way, each spouse owns a half interest in the asset.

Other Matters That May Need Family Attention

Here's a checklist of actions to be completed in the period of time between your death and up to a year after. Check all applicable boxes.

Contact the attorney to have the will read and to see what has to be done in regard to estate settlement.

The beneficiary can choose to take proceeds in a lump sum or spread them out as payments over the years.

Contact the Social Security Administration. Social Security pays a lump sum death benefit. A surviving spouse can get survivor's benefits as early as age 60. If a surviving spouse is disabled, they may get benefits even earlier. Minor children may also be entitled to survivor's benefits when a parent dies.

Contact companies holding retirement plans. There may be money left in them to be paid out to survivors. Like life insurance, proceeds can be paid in a lump sum or in installments.

Call the Veterans Administration (VA). A surviving spouse and dependent children may be entitled to a small pension if the deceased was a veteran. The VA will pay partial burial expenses and provide a headstone or marker as well as an American flag to drape over the casket, without charge. If the burial is in a national cemetery, the VA will provide a grave site and pay burial costs.

Consult with the health insurance company. If illness is determined to be the cause of death, the insurance company may cover some of the associated expenses. Future premiums may also be less if the policy has covered two or more people and now there will be one less person covered. Some health insurance policies are also combination policies that provide some death benefits.

Contact former employers for benefits resulting from that employment. Refer to employment history section (Page 8).

Notify organizations where the deceased held memberships. Some offer memorial services. They may have life insurance and may return part of dues paid. Organizations/phone numbers/emails:

Collect life insurance policies and call the companies and ask for death claim forms.

How Your Estate Plan Can Benefit Your Favorite Causes

Once you have completed this record book, you are ready to meet with your attorney and other professional advisors for their important counsel and the drafting of necessary documents.

We hope that as part of your planning you consider making a gift to us in your will or through some other form of gift planning. A gift to us, however, should never come before your personal or family needs. That's the beauty of a planned gift—you come first. Depending on the type of gift you choose, you may potentially reap benefits from your philanthropy that have very practical and desirable outcomes, such as the following:

- Ability to leave a legacy
- Income tax benefits
- A life income
- Personal satisfaction
- Reduce or eliminate capital gains taxes

Whatever your objective, we can help match your needs with the right giving tool to provide the most benefits for you, your family and us.

Please contact us and we'll be happy to explain the choices available to you—without obligation.
